SESSION 1) "Return to New, Not Just to Normal"

Craig Deao of Studer Group

A big-picture look at how disruptions to everyday life in the past have created opportunities for initiating change, and how today's transition to a post-COVID return to everyday life presents an opportunity for significant change in our quality improvement and patient safety work.

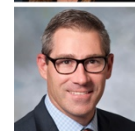

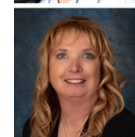

SESSION 2) "Change Under Pressure, Leveraged for the Future"

A panel conversation with:

- Jennifer Bacani McKenney, MD, Wilson County health officer
- Jenny Niblock, Chief Clinical Officer, Citizen's Medical Center, Colby
- Bobby Olm-Shipman, President and CEO, South/East Region at Saint Luke's Health System
- Ed O'Malley, President and CEO, Kansas Leadership Center (facilitator)

A physician leader in quality improvement and in public health, a hospital leader in nursing and health care quality, a hospital executive leader in innovation and collaboration will discuss post-pandemic health care in Kansas, with facilitator Ed O'Malley, an expert in facilitating change through effective leadership. Panelists will discuss changes their organizations and others made amid the pandemic with an eye to how such changes present an opportunity for improvements in post-pandemic health care.

SESSION 3) "You Can't Pour from an Empty Cup"

Ryan Estis, CEO, Ryan Estis and Associates

Wellness has taken on increased importance during this uniquely challenging time. Two-thirds of people report increased stress during the pandemic and 54% report feeling emotionally exhausted. For those working in health care, the numbers are even higher. Ryan Estis will provide the information and inspiration attendees need to care for themselves, so they are best equipped to add value and thrive in their organizations.
